The Inuit live in a very cold place in North Canada. A lot of them live in an igloo. They built their house with blocks of ice. Their houses are very warm inside.

An igloo is very strong and it is easy to build. You need a knife – that's all! How many rooms are there in an igloo? There aren't many rooms, but sometimes the Inuit built big igloos with a lot of rooms for 15 to 20 people.

The Inuit eat a lot of fish, seals, whales and polar bears: they eat every bit of the animal and they use the skin for clothes to keep them warm in the cold weather and snow. There aren't any shops to buy food, so they have to hunt animals.

The Inuit are people who live in South Canada.

On 1st September it was the first training practice of the new school team. Mr. Jones, the trainer, announced the date for the first match with a team from another town. He told his players to play like champions, to give their best in the trainings and to believe they can win the cup.

At the beginning Frank couldn't save a few goals. And just as the other boys were starting to make laugh at him, Mr. Jones gathered them and said: "You are a team. But more important – you have to be friends, too. When someone makes a mistake, don't laugh at him, but encourage him. Nobody here is a perfect player. That's why you will train every day. If you are united as players and as friends, you can be a great team. In two weeks I will choose the captain. Show me I can trust each one of you."
